

Taos Onstage celebrates Women's History Month with
If A Door Opens: A journey With Frances Perkins

A forgotten woman, Perkins worked all of her adult life for decent working conditions and fair pay for the working people of America. She was an early advocate for the immigrants who worked in the factories during the early 1900s. She was appointed the first woman cabinet member under Franklin Roosevelt and was the architect of much of the New Deal legislation. We owe her thanks for Social Security, minimum wage, a 40-hour work week, abolition of child labor, fair labor standards and much more. Don't miss this entertaining and educational play!
